

I do not think the FCC should vote to eliminate existing ownership caps, cross-ownership restrictions, and duopoly regulations over the broadcast media. The current system wherein the broadcast airwaves are owned by the public and held by the government in trust ensures that the public gets the most honest media coverage that is not serving any private company's interests. Anything else and the already deteriorating state of the media in America will only get worse.